In today’s global market, competition for the best talent is fierce. Leading international companies know that investing in human capital is a matter of strategy: retaining talent is key, and tapping into thought leadership in global business is essential to remaining competitive. The Omnium Global Executive MBA Program gives employers an opportunity to develop their top employees with an outstanding learning opportunity that delivers ongoing value to the organization.

Omnium attracts executives from every corner of the globe. The modular, 18-month format allows students to continue their full-time work in any country around the world, while earning an MBA degree from one of the world’s top business schools. Omnium, the most global executive MBA program available, provides a unique focus on leadership and Applied Innovation. The curriculum is challenging, and the network is invaluable. While the students are away from the office on program modules, many remain in touch online and work remotely as their academic schedules allow.
Employer Support

The Omnium Global Executive MBA Program requires that all students have the support of their employer for the time that will be required to complete the program (approximately 12 weeks away from the office over an 18-month period). Financial support is optional, though many companies recognize the value in providing both time and financial support to help their employees excel in the program.

Employers gain:
• Direct and immediate transfer of leading-edge management practices to their operations
• Energized top-performers who bring new analytical and leadership practices to the organization
• Fresh insights and solutions to corporate challenges through in-company group projects
• Insight on best practices and new ways to adapt to changing international business conditions
• International perspectives gleaned from the student and his/her classmates
• Opportunities for business development meetings in North America, East Asia, South Asia, Europe, South America, and the Middle East during the student’s global program modules

In today’s dynamic marketplace, investing in executive-level human resources is one of the best ways companies can gain long-term competitive advantage, while retaining their top performers.

According to the Executive MBA Council, organizations often see rapid payback that exceeds their investment. In one study, participating organizations reported that the resulting revenue enhancement or cost containment of the EMBA in-company project exceeds the cost of EMBA tuition 85% of the time. What’s more, 35% of the students deliver a return to their organization that is at least three times the cost of tuition.

SOURCE: WWW.EXECUTIVEMBA.ORG (2013)

Real-World Results

Participants apply the knowledge and techniques learned in their courses to their on-the-job responsibilities. Individual and group projects, which are incorporated into the curriculum, can be based on real situations facing program participants and their organizations.

These projects allow sponsoring companies to gain new understanding of the latest advancements in management, Applied Innovation, operations and strategic practices.

The diversity of each class facilitates the exchange of best practices across a range of industry sectors and countries. Cases, simulations, team based projects and class discussions are structured to provide opportunities for participants to share their management experiences and their knowledge of national markets with their international project teams. While on international program modules, participants work on team-based consulting projects for local businesses, in some cases developing new lines of business or helping an existing business to grow. Students make presentations to the senior managers and receive valuable feedback on the feasibility of their recommendations.

What Our Alumni Say

“You end up with an unparalleled network of like minded executives from around the world.”

“Working with team members from around the world offers a multitude of perspectives that you normally are not exposed to even working in a multi-national corporation.”