Kenneth S. Corts is Professor of Business Economics and Associate Dean, Undergraduate Education at the Joseph L. Rotman School of Management. He also serves as Director of Rotman Commerce, the undergraduate commerce program offered jointly by the Rotman School and U of T's Faculty of Arts and Science.

Through his research, teaching, and consulting, Professor Corts applies advances in industrial organization economics, game theory, and competitive strategy to a wide range of problems and industries. His work addresses topics in pricing, network economics, organizational design, and regulation.

He has published numerous articles in academic journals such as the Rand Journal of Economics, the Journal of Law, Economics, and Organization, the Journal of Industrial Economics, and the Journal of Economics and Management Strategy. He has also published a number of Harvard Business School case studies that are used at top business schools throughout the world. He has presented his research to audiences at Harvard, Yale, Stanford, MIT, Kellogg, Wharton, the University of Chicago, the University of California at Berkeley, the University of Michigan, the National Bureau of Economic Research, the US Federal Trade Commission, the US Department of Justice, and the Canadian Competition Bureau, among other institutions. He served as Editor at the Journal of Industrial Economics from 2005-2010 and has won grants and fellowships from the National Science Foundation, the Alfred P. Sloan Foundation, and the Social Sciences and Humanities Research Council of Canada. He has been a visiting professor at UCLA and a visiting scholar at UC-Berkeley and IESE.

In addition to his academic accomplishments, Professor Corts has provided expert testimony for the Canadian Competition Bureau, co-authored a policy analysis paper for the UK Office of Fair Trading, consulted on criminal antitrust matters in the U.S., and engaged in executive training and consulting for large IT, pharmaceutical, energy, and manufacturing firms.

As Associate Dean, Undergraduate Education and Director of Rotman Commerce, Professor Corts has overall responsibility for the Rotman Commerce program, which enrolls over 2300 undergraduates. Reporting to the Deans of the two parent faculties, he sets the strategic priorities for the program, spearheads curriculum development, and serves as the liaison with senior academic administrators and faculty committees across the university. He also leads the program's administrative staff, which is responsible for registrarial services, student advising, career services, student life, co-curricular programming, student leadership development, student recruitment and admissions, and Rotman Commerce's own alumni network and annual fund. In addition, in his role as Associate Dean at the Rotman School, Professor Corts is a member of the Senior Management Group, which advises the Dean on general policy matters at the School.
