Set the right direction.

Being able to adapt quickly to new conditions is a key predictor of success. What worked in the past will not necessarily work in the future. Leaders need to help their organization change with the times in spite of the fact that doing so challenges the very notion of how things have worked so far. Rotman's Leading Strategic Change program helps organizations thrive with tools targeting behavior, design and culture, to engage and implement sustainable change.

Inspire effective action.

Throughout this program, you will progress from analyzing your change initiative through the design of a framework for change to developing a unique model for accelerating the process in your organization. Rotman's Model-Based Problem Solving approach will enable you to tackle your project's most complicated challenges, make better decisions and achieve optimum results.

Dive deep into these topics:

- organizational diagnosis
- design tools for change
- behavioural tools for change
- cultural tools for change
- scoping your perspective

We're here to help.

Included in your program fee is one-on-one coaching, new strategies, a spectrum of best practices, a customized change model and valuable connections to a network of peers from varying backgrounds and organizations. Time is the most constrained resource in today's organizations, so Rotman has created this highly compressed learning program to integrate with personal and professional schedules, ensuring a comfortable and productive experience.

Who should attend?

The program is aimed at senior executives, including those at the vice-president and director levels, in both private and public sector organizations, who are at the helm of significant change initiatives in the early stages of development.

As a participant, you will be required to come to the program with a change leadership initiative which is in its early stages, ideally an 'idea' about some aspect of your organization that needs to change.
